

Let's Go Clubbing

Maybe you're thinking, I wish there was a place that I could meet more people. Maybe connect with people who share the same major and interests? Maybe you'd love to get a free meal every now and then. Maybe you just want a way to get more involved on campus. Maybe you're not thinking any of those things at all—but now that I've brought it up, those things don't sound too bad. In that case, joining the Communication Studies Club is the key to all of those things. The CMST club meets once a month in COM 321 and always provides amazing food—this week is Chick-Fil-A (not sure if I'm supposed to disclose that, but if you're reading this, you have the inside scoop). In the past we've had pizza, salad, chicken wings, etc. Each week this semester we're having a CMST alumni speak to us about post grad life, how they got where they are, tips and tricks for the job hunt, and things they wish they knew before leaving college.

At our last meeting, we chatted with CMST alum, Mason Burgin, who is now working in the social media department for the New Orleans Saints. This month's guest speaker is Maggie Keene. She is a CMST alum and currently pursuing her graduate degree in Comm Studies while working as an admissions counselor for the University. So, you won't want to miss out on hearing from her if you're thinking about going to graduate school or working in higher education! This is the perfect way to network, get exposure to career ideas, and get the gears turning to think about post graduate life. Not only is it nice to hear from alumni, but it's also a great opportunity for underclassmen to meet older CMST students who can share their experiences and give class, internship, and work experience advice. The officers in the club are CMST seniors who would love to answer any questions about the major or the opportunities Comm Studies offers, so don't be afraid to say "Hi!". Each meeting is truly such a good time with even better people. So, if this sounds like something you'd be interested in, stop by! This month's meeting is on Thursday, November 7th at 6:30, bring a friend, and come treat yo'self to some Chick-Fil-A.

Hope to see you all there!
